

Airline training planning software that keeps training one step ahead of the operation.

Bring initial training, upgrades, recurrent requirements and training capacity into one connected plan, so you can see what's coming and keep qualified pilots flowing into the operation.

THE CHALLENGE

Training is competing with the operation.

Initial training, upgrades and recurrent requirements all compete for simulator time, instructors and pilots. Instructors may also be flying the line, priorities change, and sometimes the immediate needs of the operation have to come first. But every change has an impact somewhere. Aeroplanned gives your training team visibility across the whole picture, from what should be achievable months and years ahead to what is actually happening today. So when things change, you can see the impact, adjust the plan, and make decisions with the wider operation in view.

WHAT YOU GET

- Reduce peak demand
Use the flexibility in recurrent windows to reduce training demand at the times your operation is under the most pressure.
- Reduce support pilots
Find better pairings and minimize pilots being taken off the line to support another pilot's training.
- Make better use of capacity
Plan recurrent training around available simulator and instructor capacity.
- Plan capability ahead
See when additional simulator capacity or instructor qualifications will be needed to meet future demand.
- Make use of excess capacity
See where capacity is available and where there may be opportunities to take on external training.
- Act on shortfalls early
See future gaps with enough time to move training, adjust resources or secure external slots.

HOW AEROPLANNED WORKS — THE THREE LEVELS OF PLANNING

STRATEGIC Set the direction

Training demand and planned capacity, balanced for best possible results.

TACTICAL Make it achievable

Training plans, recurrent windows, instructor rosters and simulator slots in place, adjusted as the operation changes.

OPERATIONAL Deliver it, in priority

Every pilot, instructor and simulator slot ready to go.

"Aeroplanned truly understands our needs. Their deep insight into the operations of a commercial airline group is clearly reflected in a software solution that is both practical and effective."
